June 2018

Note from the Chair

We are wrapping up the first half of the year already and it is a great time to take a look back at all that we have accomplished and think of what we can still do. I would like to give a shout out to all the brand new student groups that have joined us in the past couple of months. It is great to see that engineers at the university level are already starting to get involved in humanitarian work!

Read on for news about your fellow SIGHT groups around the world and thank you for all that you do!

Video: Engineering a Level Playing Field - Getting Humanitarian Supplies to Market (a recorded E4C Webinar)

A revolution began a decade ago to design products for people living at the "base of the pyramid." Since then, thousands of new technologies have been invented to help provide better access to food, shelter, energy, but few have found their way into the hands of those that need them most.

View this webinar to learn:

- How a global marketplace can speed delivery of humanitarian products.
- The advantage of including local suppliers to a level playing field for suppliers and manufacturers around the world.
- How crowdfunding provides a new sales channel for manufacturers and suppliers of aid supplies.
- What's changing in the online donation space and why nonprofits and others need to engage online more than ever.
- How you can get involved.
